PREPARATION OF COFFEE IN FRANCE. -In Paris the coffee is nectar compared with what we call coffee. The French use three kinds of coffee, Mocha, Java, and Rio, mixed in equal parts. The coffee, before roasting, is winnowed, to cleanse it of dust, etc.; it is then culled or picked over; every black or defective level. picked out, as well as stones. seeds, or rat-droppings, which are abundant in most coffee. It is then put into tubs of clean water and well washed, then spread to dry; when dry it is ready for roasting. The coffee required is roasted daily at large establishments; while warm it is ground and put upon glazed papers of a conical shape, holding from two ounces to half a pound, and sealed up. Gentlemen, as they leave their places of business for home and dinner, when convenient, call and take the needed supply. The coffee is put into a pot or digester in cold water, and then set over a lamp expressly for the pur-pose, and there heated—not boil-ed, but steeped; from the digester no steam or fumes arise. When ready, you have your cup of coffee. It is coffee, and a beverage delicious, health-giving; not the bitter, acrid, filthy, naucous drug we are in the habit of par-

SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 15, 1865

Rather Hard.

We notice in looking over the minutes of the Conference, that on one occasion, Brigham, among other things, assured his bearers that they were lamentably wanting in enterprise and intelligence. of which, whether true or not, he of all others should be the last to accuse them. Gratitude, if nothing else, should have scaled his lips on the score of their imbecility for, whatever others may think, he ought to acknowledge that their abnegation of manhood but made them more ductile instruments of his ambition -their treason to themselves was truth to him. Had there been any individuality displayed among them, where would have been his power to enslave their very minds; if enlightered intelligence, how long, think you, would pretentions hypoericy and prophecies, false as they are infamous, maintain their degrading influence upon their very souls?

No, the very moment that the eclipse of fanaticism disappears from the minds of this people, that moment sees the hopeless decline of priestly authority among them, and we bid the event God speed, with all our heart.

The Post's special says: advices from Goldsboro of the 10th states that positive information was received at that place. that Johnstons army was 15 miles north east of that city.

The Herald's correspondent at Bentonville says, up to that time the captures from Lee's army were immense in men and material and for miles the roads were strewn with wagons, artilery and amunition, showing with what tenacity the pursuit was pressed. Sheridan made the largest part of the captures; but the infantry are entitled to an equal share of credit. Our loss in the pursuit is not large. The rebel were greatly surprised at the rapidity of our movements.

The Herald's City Point correspondent of the 9th, says: It was reported that the President, last night, received a communication on the subject of peace, which came from without our lines.

City Point is still the base of supplies for our armies in the field, and railroad communication was opened to Nottaway Court House.

New York, April 13th.

The Herald's Richmond correspondent says: The people in Virginia, and Richmond in particular, appear to be at last, fully satisfied with the experiment of the southern confederacy, and are making preparation for the return of the State to a loyal position in the Union. Influential citizens are still engaged in endeavoring to secure the best terms they can. The feeling of the majority in Richmond against Jeff Davis and other leaders of the rebel government, is represented as having become very bit. ter. At least 5,000 white people in Richmond are now entirely dependent on the Government and Northern parties for their daily supply of food, and but for these, they would starve. Government officers are issuing 12,000 rations per day to these destitute dupes of secession. The work of closing up the city and taking possession of the mills and manufactures of the rebel government and abandoned property of all kinds and putting them in proper order, is being vigorously prosecuted, under the direction of Gen. Shipley, and for the necessary labor which this involves, a large number of negroes are employed. The amount of property thus secured to the Government is enormous, and much of the secreted property discovered in the dwellings of citizens, including, it is said, vast quantities of articles from friends in the North to administer to the wants of the imprisoned Union soldiers.

The remains of Col. Dahlgren have been discovered near Richmond. They have been exhumed and sent to Washington.

The Times City Point special says: Lee has expressed the desire to depart for Europe with his family at an early day- He is much affected by his defeat. Jeff Davis has deserted him and is retreating on his own account.

The Richmond Whig of the 12th contains a call, signed by members of the Legislature of Virginia and a number of citizens of an immediate meeting and general assembly of the State, to consider the restoration of peace to Virginia and other questions, involving life, liberty and property. The United States military authorities have consented to give safe conduct to the Governor and members for ingress and departure, in order that the may have full deliberations on public affairs. The order suspending trade operations within Virginia, except in that portion known as the eastern shore and the States, North Carolina and South Carolina, with that portion of the State of Georgia immediately bordering on the Atlantic, including Savanah, until further orders, are revoked by command of Lieut. Editors have been arrested for commenting on the conduct of Marshal Bazaine, and discords in the Imperial family are said to be numerous.

Washington, April 13th. Genl. Grant arrived here this afternoon, accompanied by his chief of staff Col. Gamble, commanding the Union forces at Fairfax Station, has received a message from Mosby, in which the latter savs he does not care about Lec's surrender, that he is determined to fight as long as he has a man left.

The State Department has promulgated the following: A formal notice of the termination of the reciprocity treaty was given by Mr. Adams to the British government on the 17th of March. Its receipt is duly acknowledged on that day; therefore, according to the stipulations contained in the treaty, it will expire in twelve months from that date, viz: 17th of March, 1866.

The World's special of to night says: It is stated that as soon as Lee decided to surrender, he set to work to devise a plan by which such act would result in peace. He proposed to Grant, that if generous terms were granted him, he would himself go to Johnston and urge him to surrender. Grant is understood to have met this proposal in the spirit in which it was made, and considering that he could represent President Lincoln in the matter, granted even more liberal terms than was suggested. It was finally decided by Grant, that he would proceed to Washington and urge upon Lincoln to stop all recruiting and issue a proclamation of amnesty, or in lieu thereof, make it known that he would deal in a liberal manner with the soldiers and people of the South ; in the meantime, Lee would visit Johnston in person.

Washington, April 13th. To Dix:-The Department, after mature consideration and consultation with Lieut. Gen. Grant upon the results of the recent campaigns, has come to the following determination, which will be carried into effect by the appropriate orders, to be immediately issued:

First, to stop all drafting and recruiting in loyal States.

Second. To curtail the purchases for arms, ammunition, quartermaster and commissary supplies, and reduce the expenses of the military establishment in its several branches.

Third. Reduce the number of General and staff officers to the actual necessities of the service.

Fourth. Remove all military restrictions on trade and commerce, as far as may be consistent with the public safety. As soon as these measures can be put in operation, it will be made known by the public orders of Stanton.

New York, April 13th.

The Post's special says: Although Seward suffers severely, he has been able to dictate his dispatches to our Ministers abroad. In these dispatches he takes the ground that the war is over, the rebellion crushed, and also apprises foreign governments that it is expected the rebel pirates will no longer be allowed to enter foreign ports.

It is stated that information has been received at the French Embassy of the dangerous illness of the Emperor Na-

Washington, April 13th.

A correspondenct from the army of the Potomac says: very little fighting took place on the 7th. At Farmville, there was skirmishing between the enemy's rear guard and the second corps with the second division of cavalry. The result being unimportant. Lee intended to fall back to Burkesville, but being cut off by our forces getting to Burkesville, He changed his course and started through Farmville on the marning of the 7th, after crossing the Appomatox, the bridges were burned and before our troops could get near the enemy had taken a position. a mile the river, where they made a stand in order to allow their wagon train to get out of the way. While reconstructing the bridge the 2d division under Crook, attacked them vigorously, driving them back some distance, but they had a force dismounted and lying in ambush. which poured a heavy fire into our men. As they advanced to the second attack, they were compelled to fall back on their supports. The rebels soon after retired. The loss on both sides was very light. The 20th corps soon after crosed the river and pushing on after the enemy, drove them behind their newly built wall. Gen. Smythe was severely wounded in leading the charge. The loss in the second corps will be about off 150, mostly of Smythe's command.

On the morning before the enemy crossed the river, 12 guns were taken from them and afterwards six more and 2,000 prisoners. The number of prisoners taken on the 6th is put down at 790, almost entirely of Kershaw's and Curtis Lee's divisions. The field where the surrender took place, was almost covered with the enemy's dead, nearly all of them being shot in the head and the upper part of the body. The position was a very favorable one for them, but our artillery had a good range on an adjoining hill and our men charged up the ascent with such impetuosity, that some were bayoneted before they left their breastworks. The road for miles was strewn with broken wagons, caissons and baggage of all kinds, presentipg a scene seldom witnessed on the part of Lee's army. The loss on the 6th will sum up about 1,000 killed and wounded-The 6th corps suffered the heaviest.

Another letter dated on the evening of the 8th says: Stragglers are found scattered along the line, and as the troops pass they come in, surrender and express their determination to fight no lenger, as they consider the rebellion as over. Four guns were brought in this morning, besides a long train of ambulances, many of them containing the wounded, who were placed in the hospital and cared for.

Gen. Hayes was relieved from command of the 20th division of the 2d corps, for tardiness in moving and commanding, in obedience to the orders of another.

A letter of the 9th says: Notwithstanding the correspondence between Grant and Lee yesterday, which led all to expect a formal surrender this morning, the latter is exerting all his energy to escape. A net was laid for him. He marched rapidly all yesterday afternoon and evening, until he ran against Sheridan. At the Appomatox Court House, a sharp fight ensued, resulting in the capture of a number of prisoners, and checking their retreat. The 5th and 6th corps were close up in support of the cavalry, and during the night took up a strong position across the main road and on the south side of the Appomattox river, and on the north side, cutting them off from retreat in that direction. Early this morning Sheridan attacked vigorously, and for some time a brisk engage-ment was carried on. About nine A. M. a flag of truce appeared in front of bis line, and he was informed that bostilities had been suspended. This was o used by an agreement made by Gen. Ord, consenting to cessation of firing, so as to communicate with Grant, and was done, it is said, without proper authori-ty. Sheridan's Adj. General was allow-ed to come through the rebel column, to communicate with Gen. Meade, who stated that he knew of no such arrage-ment, and that he was about to move northward, in accordance with his previous intentions. Lee, however, sent unother message, desiring to have an interview with Grant, to arrange terms of surrender. Meade was thus obliged to grant a two hours armistice, in order to communicate with Grant, who had moved around to the left during the night. [Here the dispatch closed.]

FRIENDSHIP .- He only is fit to be chosen for a friend who can give counsel or defend my cause, or guide me right, or relieve my need, or can and will, when I need it do me good. Only this I add: into the heaps of doing good, I will recken loving me, for it is a pleasure to be loved; but when his love signifies nothing but kissing my cheek, or talking kindly, and can go no farther, it is a prostitution of the bravery of friendship to apend it upon impertinent people who are, it may be, loads to their families, but can never ease any loads; but my friend is a worthy person when he can become to me a guide or a support, an eye or an hand, a staff or a rule. Can any wise or good man be angry if I say I choose this man to be my friend because he is able to give me counsel, to restrain my wanderto comfort me in my sorrow; he is pleasant to me in private, and useful in public; he will make my joys double, and divide my grief between himself and me? For what else chould I choose ?

For being a fool and useless? For a pretty face and a smooth chin? I confess it is possible to be a friend to one who is ignorant and pitiable, handsome and good for nothing, that eats well and drinks deep, but he cannot be a friend to me; and I love him with a fondness or a pity, but it cannot be a noble friendship.

Ir you are poor, sit down and growl about it. By so doing you are sure to get rich, and make yourself particularly agreeable to everybody.
